Supporters rally behind Speedway legend Leigh Adams

The Australian and International Speedway community have rallied behind legend Leigh Adams as he recovers from serious injuries sustained in a riding accident in the Northern Territory earlier this month.

Following the accident a group has been created on the social network website Facebook, giving family, friends and fans a chance to send their messages of support.

The 'Leigh Adams Love and Support Group' has been greeted with an amazing response, rallying more than 4,100 followers passing on message of support and encouragement to Leigh and his family.

Speedway photographer and close friend Mike Patrick, creator of the group, has urged fans to keep their messages of support coming in.

"I am in touch with Leigh's wife Kylie, who reads and passes on the messages to Leigh, all of which will be read by the man when he's well enough to do so," Patrick said.

"I know they will help him on the long road to, hopefully, a full recovery from the injuries that he now faces."

Motorcycling Australia (MA) encourages all Motorcycle Sport fans to show their support for a true legend of Speedway and become a member of the Leigh Adams Love and Support group.

Mildura-based Adams suffered fractured vertebrae, extensive spinal cord damage, punctured lungs, broken ribs, a broken scapula and a small fracture in his neck in a crash while riding south of Alice Springs on June 7.
